Adult contemporary rock, Christian driven, but different, bringing in elements of, jazz, blues, and pop, with a hint of R&B.

Larry Kane's CD is sure to please a wide range of listeners. The music is edgy, unique, and passionate, containing themes about love, life, and God.

Reviewers have compared it to Jack Johnson, Sting, Paul Simon, Toby Mac, and Dave Matthews. Some of the songs are simple- some songs feature complex vocals and engaging sax work.

Shout It Out Loud Band is a group of fun loving musicians who have come together to meet other people right where they are, to help them connect with God, and live a more positive and fulfilling life. The music and especially the live presentation addresses the problems and frustrations of life, yet offers some solutions which people can use to gain their own personal victories.

Album details: (see CD liner credits if included)

The CD 'SHOUT IT OUT LOUD' was recorded and mastered at the Railway studio in North Ridgeville, and Larry played much of the of the parts and brought in some friends and studio musicians to play the rest of the music. 'Shout It Out Loud Band' has been formed to play the music at concerts and shows, and the band's guitarist Matt Deulley is also featured on drums and guitar on one track on the CD.

The current Shout It Out Loud Band lineup is;
Larry Kane- vocals, sax, flute, guitar, WX7 wind synth, and keyboards.
Matt Deulley -vocals, guitar and violin.
Justin Lowther -drums and guitar.
Jason Kelty -vocals, bass, guitar, keyboards and digikik.

An interesting thing is that Matt, Justin, and Jason are all accomplished drummers, and in the live show they will soon have a song where they are all featured.

The band is enjoying national airplay on Uncommon Love, Beyond Sensational, and Dark Night Of The Soul. (See website for details).

Musician glorifies God through new album, concert

By Jon Wysochanski

After more than two years of studio work and creative output, a local musician's dream of creating an album that glorifies God has come true.

North Ridgeville resident Larry Kane is no stranger to the music business. He has been performing as a saxophone player since the 1970s and 1980s, even touring with national acts.

But now he's released his first self-titled EP, "Shout It Out Loud", on Railway Records (his recording studio in North Ridgeville), and Christ is his focus.

"You get to a point where you realize God is good and benevolent, and He cares a lot about our lives," Kane, who is on the staff of the Fields United Methodist Church, said of why he recorded the album. "Your natural reaction once that hits you is to want to do something about it."

Kane said his instincts as a musician and songwriter were to express his relationship with God through his art.

For him, the musical road he has traveled was not always about God. He originally played in rock bands and started writing music with the intention of being a career performer.

"I stopped doing that to raise a family," he said of his time spent in bands in the '80s. "Family became more of a priority, and the time involved with being in a band just didn't work for me. My wife was supportive (of my music), but it just wasn't a good fit for kids."

At one point in his life, Kane went through a career crisis and some challenging personal issues. He said he was talking with his friend, Ernie Krivda, a local jazz musician, about God when the name of Jesus came up.

"Ernie said, 'Well, He beat death,'" Kane recalled. "It started a process in my life where I really began searching for God."

He made the rounds of various religions and spiritual paths, but it was ultimately when he realized he could know God through Christ that his life changed. And with that change in perspective came a change in his music.

"I no longer wanted to 'play the hard rock, let's go get laid and steal a motorcycle' type of music. It just didn't fit me anymore," Kane said with a laugh. "So, I had to make a decision to play music that was focused on what I believed in."

The album, which consists of 13 songs, was produced by Kane, who played about 60 percent of the parts. Other local studio musicians contributed to the recordings, and he said each song took between 20 and 40 hours to complete.

But the ideas for his songs, which are Christian in theme, take much longer to formulate. He is inspired by real-life situations, which he then transforms into music.

The album is currently getting airplay on Christian radio stations on the East Coast, as well as one station in Canada and even one in Germany, Kane said.

Music is a good way to communicate about God, he said, and it is a great format for those who have something to say. His band, "Shout It Out Loud," is directed toward Christians.

"The name of the band is intended to be an encouragement to believers," Kane explained. "You cannot keep something good under your hat. People don't have a problem screaming at a football game about their favorite player. How much more about a God who loves you?"

Kane's wife, Maria, has always been supportive of his musical endeavors. Her family is very musical, and she understands his passion, he said.

"A lot of guys have wives that aren't so supportive of musicians," he said. "When I finally realized it was time to begin this project, she said, 'It's about time.'"

Maria is excited he has finished the album.

"I've always supported him from the get-go, and I think it's awesome that it's come this far," she said.

Matt Deulley, who recorded with Kane on the album and plays guitar in the band, is equally excited. As a Christian, he wants to use the talents he has been given to glorify God, he said.

"I always wanted to be a part of a Christian band," he explained. "The Lord gave us the gifts we have, and to use them on anything else is, in my opinion, a waste. I want to use my gifts to benefit Him and to reach out to other people."

For Kane, Jesus and music are life.

"Music is a way to express what can't be seen, through something that can at least be heard," Kane said of his emotions and feelings. "Jesus, to me, means life, freedom, clarity, rescue and He's been the reset button for my life. A lot of people who aren't too crazy about church would be crazy about God if they got to know him."

Shout It Out Loud to perform Friday

As Larry Kane puts it, "Things just fall into place nicely sometimes and sometimes it's like pulling teeth. I've been in both places, and the one is way cooler than pulling teeth."

Kane, who fronts the Christian adult contemporary rock band Shout It Out Loud, clearly puts Friday's free 7:30 p.m. concert at Fields United Methodist Church, 34077 Lorain Road, in the former category.

And he also counts an upcoming United Kingdom release of two of the singles off the group's CD, titled "Beyond Sensational" and "Uncommon Love," in that same category.

"That will be at the end of the month. Before it makes it to the U.S., our marketing outfit wants it to go to Britain. That way, you can get some momentum going, especially if it does well someplace else first."

Released on the indie label Railway Records, the CD is being promoted

Artist Bio

Larry Kane -vocals /sax /guitar /keys

The former Greater Cleveland Director for "The Jesus Film" Project, Larry has played in numerous bands in Ohio as well as internationally, and has worked as a studio musician. Performing in places ranging from Soul Train to American Bandstand to Attica Maximum Security Prison, he enjoys being really "over the top", giving all he has to entertain and encourage the audience.

Matt Deulley -guitar/vocals/drums/violin

Started playing drums on his church's worship team, while developing other skills like playing video games, finding discount tickets to movies, and bird watching. Matt plays guitar, drums, keys, and percussion- also viola, violin (and he plays kazoo pretty well too!). Matt is married to his high-school love, and his hero is Batman.

Justin Lowther -drums/guitar

Raised in southern Ohio, likes rock music and jazz. His entry into music was unusual - as a young boy he served in his church as the "drum roadie", and helped set up the drums each week. One time the drummer was unable to come and play, so Justin offered to sit in, and it went well, so soon after he began playing drums regularly at services. Some time later, God "called" him to be a musician. Justin loves family life, and is married with two children.

Jason Kelty - bass/vocals/digikik/drums

He grew up surrounded by musical instruments and later found his talent at high-range singing and harmonizing. Jason then spent six years touring the United States singing for a Journey tribute band called Escape replicating the vocal style of Steve Perry. He became the musical director and key member of several bands returning to his keyboard and guitar skills. In Christ since 2003, Jason now focuses on serving and glorifying the Lord through a speaking ministry, writing, and of course, through song.
